64 Yeah, the surrounding area will be crazy packed. It'll spill over into the street and the parks across from the ellipse. WILL. BE. WILD.

I highly doubt Trump will physically at the ellipse. Maybe by jumbotron. Too many people will have guns or potentially have guns for him to be in harms way.

I'm certainly not going to DC tomorrow to listen to speakers, get a pat on the head, submit, obey, and accept, and then just go home.

We are way beyond organizers, speakers, events, and even POTUS. The republic is on the line. I give exactly zero shits about 'speakers'. I give all shits about taking action.

We need to create a psyop within liberal circles that the only way we can get past the legacy of slavery is to banish the slave holding southern states from the union.

The South was kidnapping free blacks from non-slave states and made making banning slavery illegal as the confederacy. The north was bending over backwards to keep them in but since industrialization was making slavery too expensive they threw a hissy fit and left.

They gave zero shits about individual or state’s rights. The rich southern elite used lies and fake news to get their countrymen to fight for their own interests.

You need to take some history lessons. The war wasn’t fought over slavery, period. The South seceded because Lincoln was a tyrant and broke the constitution many times. They blockaded the south and forced obscene tariffs on them.

B) The tariffs weren't on the south, it was against foreign goods that threatened to wipe out the Northern, AKA American, industry by being so cheap. Just like how Trump is tariffing China so American industry survives. The only ones who were really hurt were the wealthy slave owners, AKA the Globalist Elites we have today.

And as my last post clearly demonstrated, the South didn't respect State's rights either so calling innocent angels in the Civil War is grossly inaccurate.
